

Hope Landing
1252 N. Cochran

Hope Landing is located at 1252 N. Cochran Avenue in Charlotte. It was created by longtime Charlotte residents Lyle and Cindy Robinette. Their vision is to take care of Charlotte Area seniors in a way never done before – in a warm, country, homelike environment. In 2007 that vision became a reality as they opened the doors for the first time. To those traveling into Charlotte via M50, Hope Landing appears to be a large red barn and out buildings, recreating what was once a marker letting travelers know they arrived in Charlotte. As the saying went “you will know you are in Charlotte when you pass the big red barn”. For those who call Hope Landing home, it is much more than a marker. Hope Landing meets a variety of needs for 20 seniors allowing them to maintain their independence and continue living a fulfilling life. Lyle describes the setting as “Country Elegance”. Hope Landing’s interior design creates a feeling of a large country home complete with wood floors, a stone fireplace, den, and dining room. Lyle and Cindy feel honored to share their “Country Elegant” lifestyle in the GFWC 2015 Home Tour.
